

About Daisy

I first picked up a brass instrument when I was in junior school aged 9, it was a cornet which I played in the school brass band at the time. I was quickly switched to the tenor horn as it suited me a lot better.

It was then that I was recommended a brass band to join, which was Bilton silver. I played in that band up until I was about 15 and I also completed up to grade 4 exams on the tenor horn.

Unfortunately, school and life got in the way which meant I could no longer commit time to playing my instrument.

In January a friend from work suggested I come along to Dunchurch band for their training band open rehearsal and I really enjoyed it, and even ended up coming to the main band open rehearsal the following evening. I enjoyed it so much that I decided to join a brass band again and even ended up contesting with them 7 weeks later!

The band has been super, super friendly and welcoming in the short time I've been here.

I also have 2 horses who do take up most of my time! But I still find the odd spare moment to practise and play with the band
